The purpose of the seminar is to experience the reading and analysis of a “heavy” leading-edge research article. The students will be required to read the assigned article (or articles if time allows), and each student will have to explain an individually assigned part. That would require also proving things not proved in the article itself (“easily seen that...” statements), resolve small errors if there are any (which can happen in articles not yet in their final journal form), and so on.

The seminar will be taught in English or Hebrew, depending on the participants' requirements. Prospective participants should fill the questioner in the course's website.
